GREENEVILLE Football Interest Increasing - Rev. Charles H. Ricketts Preached at Taftville Congregational Church on Sunday-Other Notes.

Interest in football in Greeneville is daily increasing and the local players expect to get together on Saturday next to take some definite action on the reorganizing of the team. Probably the same lineup of last year will play in the 1915 team and the enthusiasts claim that they will have one of the strongest teams that has ever played on the local grid.

PLANS FOR NORWICH SESSION

Made By Officers of State Conference of Charities and Corrections-President Leonard O. Smith Announces Tentative Programme-Proposed Legislative Measures Will Play Important Part In Meeting Here In April.

ARTIST COLONY HOLDS

Officers and executive committee members of the Connecticut Statis Conference of Charities and Correction have already begun definite plans for the 1915 abstions, which are to be held in Norwich next April, and a tentative program has already been adopted and a number of sub committees appointed. The topics selected for discussion are especially timely and the sessions next year are expected to be the most important in the annals of the organization. Never before, say those prominent in charities and correction work throughout the state, has there been as much activity along progressive lines and the need of support to bring about needed reforms. Several innovations have been adopted for the work this coming season.

One of the most important will be relative to the reforms to be brought before the next session of the legislation has been selected comprising Hon. Thomas L. Reilly, Meriden; Schuyler Merritt, Stamford; H. H. Spencer, Kensington; Ernest K. Rogers, New London and E. Kent Hubbard, Jr., Middletown. All of these are especially well fitted for this work because of their familiarity with legislation and legislative procedure.

It is proposed that, if any member of the executive committee, or of the state conference, has any legislation approval they will bring the proposed matter before the conference sessions for endorsement nd the decision of the conference will be haid before the legislative. Bedause of the importance of the interests back of any such action it is believed that the results will be much more satisfactory than haphesard procedure by individuals or scattered organizations.

sults will be much more satisfactory than haphazard procedure by individ-uals or scattered organizations. Tentative Programme.

President Leonard O. Smith of Nor-vich, just before his departure for six weeks' trip to California with the American Bankars' association, announced the tentative programme for the conference. It is simply the bareoutline and will be subject to pos-tible changes and enlargements. The sible changes and enlargements. The four main topics of discussion and ac-tion are to be as as follows: 1 Reformatory and Correctional Work. 2 Children, 3 The Family and the Comunity. 4 Mental and Physical the truth, and the me. said, of a joyful life is an appreciation of the value of the ordinary task. It is not the vacation, or the recreation, necessary as they may be, but the thing which we call duty that can give this joy. Sometimes at the end of life, its richest gifts are found to have been over-looked.

A Garden in Lyme. It is an old New England garden seen with the eyes of modern France, eyes that have rested have been over-looked.

Christ's words. "I am the way," transforms life into happiness and immediate service and opportunity.
There is no such thing as tomorrow, modern France, eyes that have rested studiously, no doubt, on the work of Cezanne, but the pictorial result has both energy and freshness.

In the Hop Yard, by Wilson Irvine, shows a truly Whistlerian indifference to the curiosity of the public. The initiated know that the unexpurgated title should have read The Devil's Hopyard, with reference to a place a few miles distant from Lyme in the true wilds of Connecticut.

Several views of New York are in the exhibition. A sprightly snow scene by Guy C. Wiggins is lacking in atmosphere in the distance, but with a remarkably fine foreground. Edmund Greacen's sketches of snowy streets give a lively impression of weather.

There is no such thing as tomorrow, because as soon as we come to it, it is today. There is no need of chasing the unattainable then. And in the realm of faith, there is only today—the future is already solved.

What the world needs today is not more definitions of God, but to hear God's own voice in his own definition of himself. Christ did not say to go to others to find out what God was. He said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." When he chose his apostles, he told them to come and see. They must judge for themselves by seeing Him who was the way. This, I am, outlines, definies, and concludes the philosophy of human faith. It signifies a faith worn by the footsteps of those who have had experience in the way. They have tested the bypaths for us.

They have found that the way He trod is the one for us to walk in. It is the way for us to win the goal.

The essential thing is not to forget the past, remember what the Bible has already done and use it as a sign board to point the way to the board to point the way to the fu-

Edwards of Bridgeport, Morris W. Seymour of Bridgeport and Schuyler Merritt of Stamford are the former presidents of the conference. ITS ANNUAL EXHIBITION.

The sixth and last of the union services by the Congregational churches was held Sunday morning at the Broadway Congregational church, with a large attendance, which listened with much interest to the address by Rev. John Timothy Stone, D. D., pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Chicago.

His text was from St. John 14.6, "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life." The secret, he said, of a joyful life is an appreciation of the value of the ordinary task. It is not the vacation, or the recreation, necessary as they may be, but the thing which we call duty that can give this joy. Sometimes at the end of life, its richest gifts are found to
